By definition, postdoctoral education and training in clinical psychology is a major field of specialty study which requires 80% or more time spent in this specialty area; however, it does include opportunity for exposure to other specialty areas.

(Not applicable) By definition, postdoctoral education and training in clinical psychology is a major field of specialty study which and requires 80% or more time spent in this specialty area; however, it does include opportunity for exposure to other specialty areas.

CE must be from an organized continuing education program, approved by APA or State Psychological Association or relevant Accredited Continuing Medical Education courses. Many states require course content and specified number of CE hours in specific areas (e.g., ethical practice, risk management, domestic violence, etc.)